317 500 permanent workers and about 1300 seasonal
473 workers during the summer. Expansion capabilities for peat industries seemed to be unlimited.

387 The Phosphorite industry was founded also at 473 the beginning of Estonia's independence. Estonians Phosphorite, Inc. in Tallinn was founded in 1920 and was made an incorporated enterprise in 1923. Its mine and plant, which produced enriched phosphorite and superphosphate, were [471] at Jõelähtme, Harjumaa. The State owned four-fifths of its stocks. In 1939 was opened a new phosphorite mine which was to yield 400,000 tons of raw phosphorite yearly. The war, however, interrupted these projects.

339 Other more important industries and plants in Estonia were:

The cement factory at Kunda, Virumaa, with about 500 workers. -369-